Solid History of Success

In 2010, a local 4th grade class was challenged to read 5 books in a week and shown how via the Million Dollar Memory (MDM) method. Students read 8 books a week, and begged their teacher for more library time the rest of the school year. They shared the method with siblings and friends and a ripple effect occurred. The school's reading scores improved.

In 2012, a 5th grade class given the same challenge read 5 books a week, plus completed an MDM program on how to remember 1000+ facts on U.S. Presidents. All students improved reading skills, including those with reading scores below grade level who became reading fluent and proficient.

These children's lives were transformed. Many were reading 400 to 700-page books three months after the program ended.

The Read 5 Books in a Week Program was created by MDM Founder, Dr. Donna Schwontkowski. She taught thousands of students how to accelerate their learning since the 1980s.

"Totally inspiring to kids and parents"

"A goal that works; a skill for a lifetime"

"Dr. Donna is an excellent role model for kids."

"This program can do the most good for society because poor 4th grade reading skills are linked to high prison rates..."

"The answer to today's poor reading statistics in the schools"
